This is now a listed building and a description of the house has been drawn up by the Department of the Environment. This states that the house was built in the mid to late eighteenth century with mid nineteenth century additions. [Watkin Watkins, however refers to building a house 'for the tenant' and this may have been Shotton Farm, in which case the farmhouse was erected between 1792 and 1811.] It is a red brick building of three storeys with a dressed red stonestone plinth and a slated roof. The front façade has a later 2 storey gabled addition. The rear also has a later projecting wing of one and a half storeys. Inside the house is a staircase with closed string and stick balusters.
